[115] The American Place restaurant was also opened in the building at the time. [116] Despite the economic slowdown in the early 1990s, 2 Park Avenue and the other properties of Mendik remained more than 95 % occupied because of Crain's New York described as Mendik's "quality management reputation". [117] In 1996, Mendik announced that he would form a real estate investment fund to control seven of his properties in downtown Manhattan, including 2 Park Avenue. [118] [119] This movement would allow Mendik to increase up to $220 million. [119] The following year, Mendik announced that his company would merge with Steven Roth's Vornado Realty Trust, giving Vornado control of 2 Park Avenue and other Mendik properties. [120] [121] In the late 1990s, the neighborhood was a center for publishing houses, and Matthew Bender & Company and Times Mirror Company occupied 2 Park Avenue. [122] The 2000s to present a Cheese Artisanal Restaurant branch opened in the building in 2001, [123] and Hartford Financial Services moved to the building that year after being displaced in the September 11 attacks. [124] Vornado placed the building for sale in May 2003; At the time, it was 99 percent rented. [31] During a renovation in the 1970s, a wall of Winold rehesions from the New York City skyline and Sabino glass chandeliers were added to the lobby. [31] [34] The mural came from a Longchamps restaurant on 59th Street and Madison Avenue, while the chandeliers came from a Simpsons department store in Toronto, Ontario. P. 34. A (9 April 1981). Creative arts. Adelson, who formed the Two Park Avenue Corporation to develop the building. [41] [42] In September, the Park Avenue Hotel closed and all of its furniture was sold. [43] Ely Jacques Kahn was hired to develop alternative plans for an industrial building or an office building, since the owners did not know what to develop on the site. [19] [44] The company of Kahn Buchman and Kahn entered with plans for a building on 2 Park Avenue, to cost $4 million in October 1926. [4] The structure should be designed in the Art Deco style, making it one of the first office buildings in Manhattan to be designed in this style. December 7, 1926. ^ "Mendik Company to form a REIT".
